Dispatch to the Homefront

Welcome to Anonymous #7. First of all I want everyone to know that I am having an awesome time in San Francisco. The scene here is quite different from the Midwest in many ways... some good... some bad. From what I can tell so far, after being here for about six weeks, is that the music out here is not as diverse. Most of the parties I have been to have been mostly house and trance music... once in while some acid too. It isn't Chicago house (which I miss oh so much) but more west coast style... not as high energy. I have heard there is some jungle here but I haven't found it yet.

The types of parties I have been going to are much smaller than in the Heartland. The biggest parties I have been to are called Sunsets thrown by a promoting group called Pacific. They happen almost every Sunday afternoon on the beach in Santa Cruz or at the Berkeley Marina and a few other locations, they are completely free (donations are not discouraged), and have the thickest vibe I have ever felt. Sunsets start at 1pm and go until the sun goes down (hence the name Sunset). As the sun is at the horizon, about to set, people join hands and cheer and dance. The best part is you can always count on a Sunset to be amazing. Frowns are not in the least bit welcome. Everyone is friendly... It is a guaranteed good time. Many people even stay home Saturday night so they are well rested for Sunset the next day.

Another soopah rad thing going on in SF is Friends and Family. They happen about every month or so and are, like Sunset, a guaranteed good time. They are small, usually 300-500 people, have a thick vibe, groovy people, are usually free-$5, and there is a bigger variety of music than most of the other parties around here. F&F is the true underground... they throw real raves... no commercial shit.

There are some great weekly things in San Francisco too. CDC SoundSystems throws an 18+ party every Wednesday where you can go to hear Carlos rip shit up. Unfortunately a lot of parties out here are 21+ because they are in clubs. So I won't be able to check them out until I get my fake ID.

Since I moved out west I haven't paid more than $5 for a party. There are big commercial $20 parties with big name DJs but there are so many other cheap, groovy things with local talent that I don't feel like I have to spend big bucks for a party like I usually did in the Midwest. Of course J2 and the elementals and a small group of other MWers (you know who you are) know what's up but all your grooviness and good intentions are condensed into this city. In SF I don't have to drive 8 hours for parties like that, however, I do miss the road trips. All in all I am having a ball and meeting some great people (the SF ravers are a spunky bunch) but I still miss the Midwest... especially the music so send me tapes!!!

I wish I could be at IO2 with you but unfortunately I don't have the cash flow for the plane ticket. I hope you all have a safe and fun weekend. Be sure to give Jewleeya a big hug for me cuz I miss her, too.

Luv Ya,

Ms. Wiggles

SF Raver visits the Mid-West

Parties in Madison, WI and Chicago, IL

So I was visiting the mid-west the month of June, working as a visiting physicist at FermiLab in Batavia, IL - that's near Aurora, IL, Wayne's world. But I wanted - no, needed - some dancing to balance all that sitting down and driving from Gurnee, IL to Batavia.

I have been going to parties for several years now, most of them in SF, so wanted to check out the scene in the mid-west. Plus, Ellen - Ms. Wiggles - told me that there are some excellent musick happening. So on the weekend of June 18, 1995 Ellen told me of this cool-sounding party in Madison, WI, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea", I think. Called the phone # - which I got from the hyperreal site in SF and found out the location. I had been to Madison before, so it sounded like it was pretty near the campus. Made it to the location ok. the party was inside a partly finished building/arena. The musick played was pretty hard for these SF ears, used to hear mostly house. As a matter of fact, I wish we had more teckno/hard beats in SF. The musick selection as good, tho' the dj's did not build much of a wave or anything. The vibe was pretty good, but people were dancing by themselves, no group dancing. Even people who knew each other seem to prefer being alone. This was surprising to me, used to group dancing and to meeting new people. That was rather hard to do, since most people wanted to keep to themselves. Luckily ran into Ms. Wiggles and Jewleeya. they seemed to be having fun, giving out the Anonymous Girlz mag and wares on their table set up in the back. So stayed until 8 am and decided to head back to Gurnee, IL. a good party, overall but low on vibe.

The next weekend, the destination was Chicago, for a jungle party. I had promised my friends Terese and Travis that I would take them to a party in Chi-town. We all went to a "arty" party in Wicker Park. Sorry, I forgot the name of the man whose house we went to, but I do remember that he owns some gallery. Anyway, there were several people in the arts. Met couple of people, but did not talk much - I guess I did not feel like schmoozing. Anyway, left about 11 pm and called the phone # to find the location. It was way south, near 150th St. or so. We made it there ok, and were greeted by a huge crowd at the door. After a while we made inside. The location was some sort of laser "hunting" game, with many nooks and cranies. There was the main room, plus several side alcoves with musick set up. The main room was packed tightly, the musick was very good, the whole thing "clicked". For dancing with more space, the upstairs was excellent. And, the bathrooms were not that crowded, so could get water every so often. I think my friends enjoyed themselves. Also saw Ms. Wiggles and Jewleeya, again. These girlz work hard! Or is it fun too? After the party, Travis and Terese and I went back to their place, where I crashed on their spare room. Around noon Travis made these amazing pancakes, and we all had brunch!

Life, love, happiness, shit... it's all real... pain, that's real too. Friends ya love and hate, things just ain't real sometimes... yea right. Everything has some twisted purpose... most likely it's just to fuck with your head and keep you from enjoying life. Sad but true... Ya ever had a friend move away... 'specially one you really cared about... knowing most likely that you'd never see them again on any kind of extended basis. Life sucks. It goes on... but it still sucks. My age old Pappa told me that girlz are CRAZY... crazy good and crazy bad... I think he's crazy. Girlz are freaks... 'specially this one I know. She's nuts. She knows she's a freak and likes it... too much. She's a two year old... cutie with a big smile, a funky attitude and outrageous dancin' shoes. The little one went to Heaven... goroovin' in all glory... I miss ya punkin'. Yo' in my mind, in my mind. I'll see ya again someday I'm sure... I know not when. I'm sad when I think of ya bein' gone n' shit. Dance ya heart out like the crazy kid ya are... I'll join ya someday.

Astral hugs and kisses,

Evets Eyak

Afroman thinks out loud...

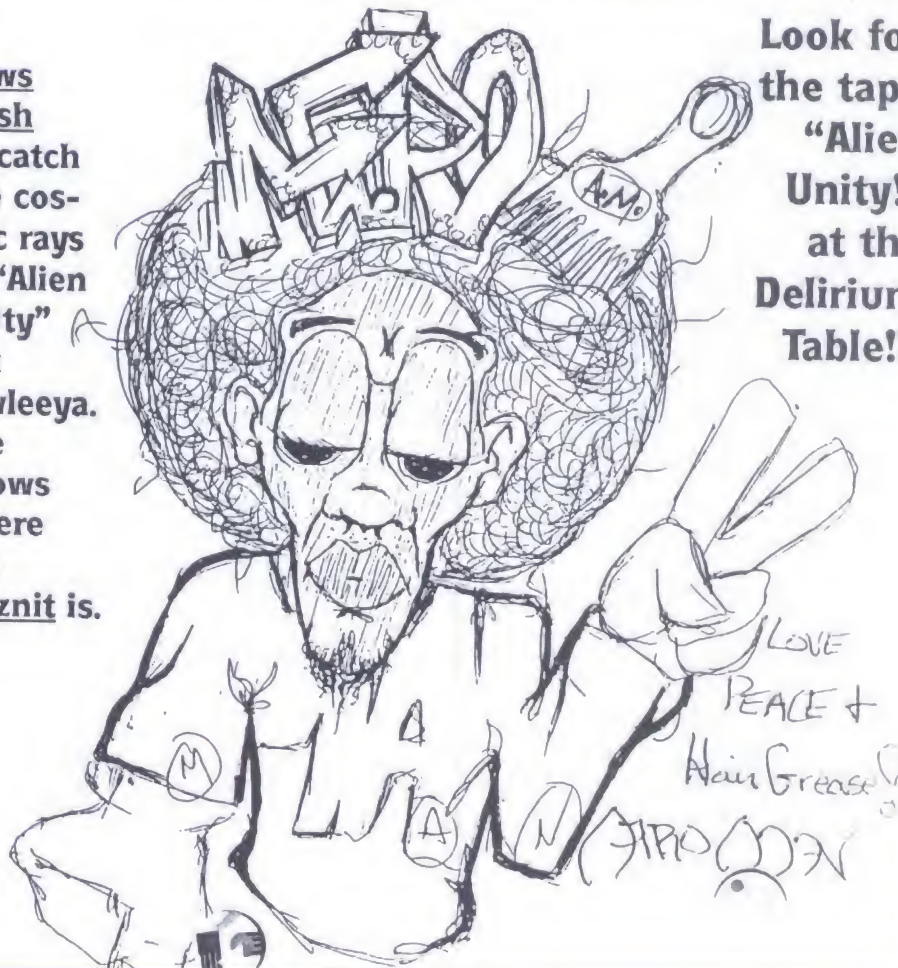

Your understanding of what the universe is all about changes as you proceed further along the path towards enlightenment. As your vantage point of perspective changes, you begin to understand more of "how it is". With this understanding comes compassion. An acceptance of "how it is" is the ability to see the Divine Plan in everything.
